Industry Requirements

Before you apply—some things to consider

Marriage celebrants perform an important and significant legal function in the community. In addition, marriage celebrants operate largely unsupervised in performing that function.

Errors or poor judgement in the discharge of a marriage celebrant's legal responsibilities can have serious consequences for marrying couples and may result in criminal charges in some cases. That is why knowledge of the law relating to the solemnisation of marriages is so important and is one of the factors the Registrar of Marriage Celebrants will consider in determining whether you are a fit and proper person to be a marriage celebrant.

It is also why there is an emphasis on maintaining a high professional standard among marriage celebrants through training and ongoing professional development.

You may only advertise your services and perform marriages once you are registered as a marriage celebrant.

Different criteria for registration as a marriage celebrant apply to people who are fluent in an Australian Indigenous language. Email marriagecelebrantssection@ag.gov.au for more information.

Substantial changes to the process of becoming a marriage celebrant came into effect from 1st July, 2017. (See www.ag.gov.au - Becoming a Marriage Celebrant to ensure you have all the facts before enrolling in this course).

Just paying for and completing the Certificate IV in Celebrancy does not mean you will automatically become a marriage celebrant. After receiving your qualification, aspiring marriage celebrants will be required to undergo the following application process with the Attorney-General's Department. Please visit the above website for further information

Marriage celebrants also have high ongoing costs, such as annual Ongoing Professional Development, optional Celebrant Association fees, insurances, business administration costs, purchase of audio equipment, internet access and website maintenance, clothing, travel, marriage stationery, storage and office facilities etc. Please take all of this into consideration when applying.

There are no specific entry requirements for this qualification However, it is anticipated that you will have completed year 10 or equivalent.

Students are required to submit a 250 word essay outlining why they would like to become a celebrant, transfer some information into a mock application form and attend a face to face interview.
